

Santa Claus' story

The holidays have arrived and it's not really cold. I remember one winter vacation of mine in July over forty years ago when it was the coldest weather ever. The name of the station where I stayed reminded me of the company that produces watches. I loved those watches, even when they named a model after the president who abolished me. But never mind, you still believe in me anyway. That's why I'm rewarding you. If you discover the details of everything I talked about and send them to the platform, you'll qualify for the Brainfinity challenge. In addition to that, if you write in lowercase letters the first name of the president I talked about here, you'll receive a New Year's card.
